Prof. Theodora Papatheodorou PhD
Professor of Early Childhood and Director of Research at the Faculty of Education, Anglia Ruskin University. Her publications include the single-authored book Behaviour Problems in the Early Years and the co-edited (with Janet Moyles) volume Working Together in the Early Years: Exploring Relational Pedagogy.

Challenging behaviours in the early years:
Whose problem is it? Educational considerations for early identification and intervention

- What is challenging behaviour in early years settings?
- What is the role of our own personal and professional attitudes in defining and identifying challenging behaviours?
- What is the role of early years curricula, and learning and teaching approaches in preventing or accentuating challenging behaviours?
- How important are these issues in the early identification of and intervention for challenging behaviours?

This talk intends to shift attention from the child, as the focus or source of challenging behavior, on to the context of early years setting and the adults who organize the setting and implement early years curricula.

Dr. Yoram Sandhaus MD
Member of the Faculty of Medicine, Bar-Ilan University. His research interests include the impact of violence on development in early childhood.

Environmental and Neuro-developmental aspects - The impact on violence in toddlers
